Kara Newport is the Chief Executive Officer for Filoli and has an extensive history in working with a variety of cultural organizations including public gardens. Kara spent much of her early career in the Philadelphia area. After completing her graduate degree through the Longwood Graduate Program in Public Horticulture administration, she was a senior development professional for Winterthur (a museum of decorative arts), Winterthur, The Philadelphia Zoo and The Franklin Institutes. Kara moved south to Charlotte North Carolina where she continue her work with fundraising for the science museum, but then found an incredible opportunity to be the Director of a public garden, her first passion. As the Executive Director of Daniel Stowe Botanical Garden, Kara led the fundraising and development of an Orchid Conservatory and a Children's Garden, designed by W. Gary Smith. In her time at Filoli, Kara has launched new initiatives and is encouraged by the wonderful partnerships with the Board, staff, National Trust for Historic Preservation and the Filoli community. As Filoli strives to become an international destination, traveling to these beautiful sites of Europe will provide inspiration and creative ideas for new programs at Filoli.
